Investigating Peril

More than 20 million people own homes in this State. They are conscious of the time and effort, and the expense, that go into maintaining these homes. They are also aware of the importance of home insurance. This is why we are concerned that the average homeowner's insurance policy in this State is not as comprehensive as it should be.

An amount is very small to this phenomenon in the north. What this means is that a small earthquake can result in a loss of property. This is why we support the effort by those who are trying to improve the quality of life in New Jersey. The legislature is considering a bill that would allow homeowners to buy policies that would cover them in the event of a loss due to an earthquake. We urge support of this bill.

In conclusion, there is now much at stake in the future of our state. We urge all citizens to support those who are working to improve the quality of life in New Jersey.

Paired Madden That Failed

A pair of red slippers is not the only pair of shoes that failed this week in the Madden family. The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which has been paired with the University of California at Los Angeles, also failed in an attempt to pair up with the University of California at Berkeley in the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The failure of this plan to bring fresh blood into the conference was due to the fact that the University of California at Berkeley was unable to meet the academic standards set by the other schools.

In the meantime, the University of California at Los Angeles is considering joining the conference, but only if it can get a better deal than the one offered by the other schools.

The Madden family, which has long been associated with the Institute of Technology, is said to be disappointed with the outcome of this latest attempt.

Bond Jumper Claims Offered

Some 60 Bond Jumper claims have been offered in the past few days, and more are expected to be made soon.

The claims, which were first made by a group of bondholders, have been supported by a number of other investors who believe that the bondholders are entitled to receive more than they have been offered.

The bondholders, who have been fighting for their rights for several years, have been promised that they will receive a fair settlement, but they have been unable to agree on a fair price.

It is believed that the bondholders will continue to press their claims until they receive a fair settlement.
