Senate unanimously OKs mandatory gun sentencing

State Senate unanimously OKed a bill that mandates long prison terms for gun crimes, a victory for Democrats who have pushed legislation aimed at stemming gun violence.

The bill, which passed 40-0, requires at least 15 years in prison for anyone convicted of using a gun in the commission of a crime. It also includes stiffer penalties for those convicted of selling guns to minors or those who have a history of gun violence.

The legislation was hailed as a significant step in addressing the state's gun violence crisis by Democrats, who have been advocating for stronger gun control measures.

People who make the news are friends and business associates

In the world of business and the news, whether as sensitive events or as the subject of jokes, are people who are friends and business associates. Today's issue of the TIDEMAKER shows an example of the situation where a Washington woman made a trip to New York.

For the family's sake, the situation might be improved if the story were not true. Although, in fact, it appears that the situation was accidental, the result is a potential danger to the safety and welfare of the residents of this borough. We cannot in any way explain the circumstances.

The police officer when the accident occurred is a message from the office that our newspaper asked him to deliver. This is not uncommon in our newspapers.

PROSPECT PARK PATTEN

By Dave Cohen

News reporter for the Prospect Park Citizen, a local newspaper in the Brooklyn borough of New York City, covers a variety of topics, including local events, community news, and general information that affects the residents of Prospect Park.

The headline reads: "Looking ahead at Manchester," indicating a focus on forward-looking information or projections. The subhead under the headline mentions a "School Superintendent Bill Gales." This suggests that the article may discuss the future plans or policies under the leadership of a new superintendent.

The content of the article appears to be centered around educational topics, possibly discussing strategies for forward planning in the school district. With the current educational climate being a point of concern, the article might delve into topics such as curriculum development, budget planning, or community involvement in the decision-making process.

The article's mention of "Manchester," a city in New Hampshire, might indicate a comparison or analysis of educational practices between Manchester and Prospect Park. This could be an attempt to benchmark against another educational institution to identify strengths and areas for improvement.

Overall, the article likely serves as a resource for readers interested in educational developments, providing insights into future planning and strategies that could be implemented in the local school district.

WATER RATIONING RULES EXPLAINED

The water rationing rules are explained in full on the following page.
editorial

Water rationing — some ways to conserve the supply

It's official — Hawthorne is now in winter water rationing. This measure comes with the realization that we must conserve our water supply. Right now, we're at 86 percent of our avg. demand. As the weather gets warmer, our water consumption will increase. To combat this, we're implementing a new program to conserve water.

Some ideas include:
- Use efficient appliances
- Fix leaks
- Install low-flow showerheads
- Use a broom instead of a hose to clean driveways

The Press welcomes letters to the editor. Correspondence should be written in English and submitted in writing or by e-mail.

Dear editor,

I am writing to express my concern about the current water rationing levels in our city. As a Hawthorne resident, I am committed to doing my part to conserve water, but I want to know if there are any immediate steps that can be taken to address this issue.

Sincerely,

Students address Haledon board

By Genevieve Johnson

Haledon — Representation of the Student Council on the Board of Education, Haledon, was discussed at a recent meeting.

Even in the smallest of town, student rights are issues, as was shown in a recent meeting of the board.

For several weeks, the board members have been discussing the issue of student representation on the board. They believe it could benefit the students and help the board make better decisions.

The boys on the board, second and third, "were really excited," said a board member. "They think it would be a good idea for the board to have some input."

A fellow board member, who declined to give his name, said, "The students are the ones who really use the school, and they should have a say in what's going on."}

It's beer versus water...

By Jim Hackett

The board members were divided in their opinion on the issue of changing fuels for the school. Some believed it would be a good idea to switch to a more efficient fuel, while others thought it would be too expensive.

According to board member Bill Bomers, who represents the 3rd Ward, the switch to a more efficient fuel would be a good idea. "The savings would be significant," he said. "We need to start thinking about the future of the school and what we can do to make it more energy-efficient."}

Survey of households part of rationing plan

By Peter L. Brown

The Survey of households part of rationing plan was designed to see how successful the new government was in its efforts to ration certain commodities. The survey included a wide range of items, from food to clothing, and was conducted in two phases. In the first phase, the survey was conducted in a sample of households across the country. In the second phase, the survey was expanded to include a larger sample of households.

The results of the survey were submitted to the government, which then used them to adjust its rationing plans. The survey was considered to be a success, with the government reporting that it had been able to ration the commodities effectively.

New Court-ordered vote: Haledon election Tuesday

By Jacon D. Smith

A New Jersey court has ordered a new election for the Haledon council. The original election was canceled due to a lawsuit filed by a group of citizens who claimed that the election was unfair. The court has now ordered a new election to take place on Tuesday.

The new election will include all of the same candidates as the original election, and will be held in the same location. The court has also ordered that all of the votes from the original election be counted again.

The court has ruled that the original election was conducted in a way that violated the law, and that a new election is necessary. The court has also ordered that the new election be conducted in a way that is fair and impartial.

The court's decision has been met with mixed reactions. Some have praised the court's decision,认为 it is a step towards ensuring that elections are conducted fairly and impartially. Others have criticized the court's decision, arguing that it is a waste of time and money.

In any case, the new election will be held on Tuesday, and all of the citizens in Haledon are encourages to participate. The court has ordered that the election be conducted in a way that is fair and impartial, and all of the citizens are encouraged to participate.

It's infuriating to be rationed when we have water

"The best — Pay more" — this is obviously the shape of the M.U. After facing shortages in food supplies and learning to cope with reduced amounts of water and electricity, we've now reached the point where gas savings are our priority. This has come to a point where our community is in the midst of a water conservation plan that requires us to use less water or face severe consequences. The city has implemented a plan to reduce our water usage by 25%, and if we fail to comply, we will face fines and penalties. This plan includes reducing the amount of water used for outdoor activities, such as watering lawns and gardens. The city has also set up a system for monitoring our water usage, and we will be charged for any amount of water used in excess of our monthly allowance. This new plan is in effect immediately, and we encourage all residents to comply in order to avoid further penalties.

North Haledon must comply with state water rationing

The Hawthorne Press
February 19, 1981

North Haledon is among about 70 towns in New Jersey that must comply with state water rationing rules, which came into effect Thursday. The order requires a 5% cut in water usage by all residents and businesses.

The order was issued by the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection as a precaution against possible drought conditions. It affects about 70 towns, including North Haledon, that are served by the Hackensack River watershed.

Community leaders in North Haledon said they were prepared for the order and had already taken steps to conserve water.

Senator Frank Lautenberg, a Democrat who represents North Haledon, said he supported the order and urged residents to comply.

"I urge all residents of North Haledon to conserve water and follow the regulations," Lautenberg said.

He added that the order was necessary to ensure a sufficient water supply for all residents.

North Haledon has a population of about 15,000 people and serves about 3,000 businesses. The order affects all water users, including businesses, schools, and governments.

The order requires residents to use no more than 5% of their normal water usage and businesses to use no more than 10%.

Residents are encouraged to conserve water by taking measures such as turning off faucets when not in use, fixing leaks, and using water-efficient appliances.

The order will remain in effect until further notice.

Tax hike of 116 points projected

The Hawthorne Press
February 19, 1981

North Haledon - A 116-point increase in the property tax for 1981 is not expected to deter businesses from coming to town, Mayor John T. O'Sullivan said Thursday.

"We have a lot of new businesses coming in and we're doing a lot of development," O'Sullivan said. "I think people are pretty happy with the way things are going here."

The tax hike is expected to bring in about $1.5 million in additional revenue for the town.

The mayor said the increase is necessary because the town is facing a budget deficit and needs more revenue to cover expenses.

Business leaders in North Haledon said they support the increase and believe it will help fund important projects.

"We're happy with the way things are going and we support the mayor's decision," said Tom Smith, president of the North Haledon Chamber of Commerce.

The town council is expected to vote on the budget next month.

Hidden ways the water shortage affects New Jersey

The recent water shortage in New Jersey has been a cause of concern and has led to several measures being taken to conserve water. Many residents and businesses have been encouraged to reduce their water usage, and some have even been fined for excessive water usage.

Businesses have been affected in various ways. Some have had to reduce their operations, while others have had to temporarily shut down. The shortage has also led to increased costs for water and energy, which has had a knock-on effect on businesses' profits.

In addition, the shortage has had a significant impact on the environment. The lack of water has led to the drying up of streams and rivers, and this has had a detrimental effect on the local wildlife.

Overall, the water shortage has had a profound impact on New Jersey, and it is likely to continue to have an impact for some time to come.
Trespasser fined $100 for being on HS property

In a Toms River courtroom, Judge Donald Brown, of the 50th District Court, fined a trespasser $100 for being on the premises of the high school. The fine was levied against a man who entered the school on the morning of March 20.

Under the gavel

Standing in front of a half-dozen police officers, a man was sentenced to a year's probation in Toms River, March 22, for entering the high school without permission. The man, identified only as John Doe, had been caught on surveillance cameras entering the school on March 18.

Variances granted to T. Colombo

The Borough of Toms River has granted a variance to T. Colombo for additional parking spaces on his property. The variance was requested by Colombo in order to accommodate the growing需求 for parking in the area.

Local school officials wanted to testify about state aid cuts

The local school officials expressed concern about the potential cuts in state aid. They believe that these cuts could negatively impact the quality of education in the district.

How to read your household water meter

The water meter is in your home and is the key to understanding how much water your household is using. It is an efficient way to track water usage and conserve resources.

Local water officials were recently interviewed about the importance of conserving water. They emphasized the need to use water wisely and to be aware of the consequences of excessive water usage.

Usage Track

The usage track is an important tool for tracking water usage over time. It helps to identify trends and to make informed decisions about water usage.

Local school officials were recently interviewed about the importance of conserving water. They emphasized the need to use water wisely and to be aware of the consequences of excessive water usage.

False fire alarms — more than a nuisance; a real danger

The rash of false alarms that are being used as a weapon on the streets of Boston may be a fertile field for someone who wants to do something constructive. Not only are the bystanders in danger from the fires that result, but the firemen who are called out are also in danger of being injured in the uncontrolled eruptions of energy. Everyone's life is at stake, and the situation is urgent. It's time that something was done.

Some concerns about intersection

The intersection of Mt. Pleasant Avenue and the Bay Street Tunnel is a frequent source of traffic snarls. People are often forced to double park and wait for hours. It's a dangerous situation, and something needs to be done about it. We need to find a solution that will improve the safety and efficiency of the intersection.

ups and downs

Minor cuts

The road is in desperate need of attention. The potholes are a hazard, and the pavement is in poor condition. Something needs to be done to fix the road before it becomes too dangerous.

Missing a court date is costly

Forbes Park, March 5—The state's top legal aid group, Pennsylvania Legal Aid & Defender Association, is calling for state lawmakers to make it easier for indigent defendants to avoid missing court dates.

The group's report, released Tuesday, found that missing court dates is a major problem for many of the organization's clients. The report noted that the cost of missing court dates can be significant, as defendants may face fines, fees, and even jail time.

"We're seeing a real increase in the number of our clients who are missing court dates," said Diana Sims, the association's executive director. "This is a real problem, and we need to find a way to make it easier for defendants to show up for their court dates."

The association is calling for changes to the state's court system that would make it easier for defendants to avoid missing court dates. The group is also calling for increased funding to support legal aid organizations, which provide free legal services to indigent defendants.

"We need to make sure that everyone has access to justice," said Sims. "Our clients are the most vulnerable in our society, and we need to make sure that they have access to the legal protection they need."
