LET'S NOT LOSE BATTLES AT HOME what this country of ours might have built with the manpower that was lost to us last year through accidents which killed 26,000 men of draft age—nearly enough to fill the ranks of two Army divisions—and injurted or killed over 9,300,000 people of all ages and both sextes.

More than half of these accidents, about 5,000,000, happened in homes. Every one had its effect on our war effort. They cost millions in doctors' fees, hospital bills and other expenses—money that might better have gone into war bonds. They kept men from work, because workers' thoughts kept wandering from the job on hand to the hospital bed where a wife or child tossed in pain.
