A Very Real Fear

When the tax reduction bill came up in the House a potentially important amendment was offered. In effect, it would have required the President to submit a budget, cutting expenditures for the next two years below the level now planned.

This was defeated, but by the comparatively narrow margin of 226-199. And now numbers of Senators are said to favor postponing action on the tax bill until fall, with lower rates, offering after Mr. Kennedy submits his next budget message. In the Fall color of the hillside foliother words, they want to see some signs of economy in government before approving any tax cut.

This is indicative of the very real fear that exists among members of both parties that blank check tax reduction, unaccompanied by cost reduction, could bring oring vacation," he pointed out. us to a disastrous fiscal situation. And the polls show that this fear is reflected to a large extent in the minds of the public at large. If soaring deficits should set off a major new wave of inflation-as some leading authorities think is almost certain—the loss in the dollar's purchasing power would far offset any tax cuts. Then, beyond that, the weakening of American prestige and economic power in today's chaotic world would compound the disaster, to unknown dimensions.

How to be a big-time saver

(even if you're short on will power) ings Plan.

It works just as well and saves you a lot of bookkeeping besides.

Every payday your employer sets aside a small amount from your check (you say how much) and puts it toward the purchase of a U. S. Savings Bond. Your Bond roll fattens up fast. Just $4.33 a week, for example, adds on three $100 Bonds every year.

There's no will power needed. And since you never see the small amount that's taken out of your check, you hardly miss it.

Of course, you save more than money

The Evidence

Competition in the oil industry is most apparent at the gasoline pump. More than 200,000 service stations in this country are seeking consumer preference. Most of us don't come in personal contact with the competitive forces in other areas of the business. But they exist—and in as intense a form as at the ser-

For instance, more than 10,000 competing companies are engaged in oil production. Then there are 12,000 wholesale distributors of oil products. And, finally, there are 1,000 petroleum transportation companies and 148 refining companies.

The fruits of this are shared, and in full measure, by all consumers of oil products, a category that includes practically everyone. The proof of that is found in the relevant statistics. During the past 10 years, the prices of all goods and services on the bureau of Labor Star on employment and unemploy facts each month in its Current Census Bureau interview tistics' Consumer Price Index rose by 13.1 per cent. by only 3.8 per cent. And in the case of gasoline, prices tice at New York City. -not counting the excise taxes which now average more than 10 cents a gallon, and about which the industry can do nothing—actually went down, by 4.3 per

It is often charged that the oil industry contains monopolistic elements. This, like many charges made against American business, is refuted by all the evidence.

All the glad and happy play. Dear the thanks, too, that we give For all of this, Thanksgiving This simple vorse was written many years ago by Harriet Prescott Spofford. It tells of the trnditional Thanksgiving -- the Thanksgiving our grandfathers knew, and that Currier and Ives immortalized in engravings. It was, of course, a day of rest and feasting. But it was more, much more—a day of prayer in which gratitude was offered for the good times of the past, and hope was held out for the future. And it was a day of affirmation in the existence of a higher power than man, and of faith in the workings of a divine providence. We live now in an infinitely more complicated time. A sophistication of dubious quality has obscured many values. Materialistic advances of almost incredible dimension have dulled the needs and wants of the spirit. And we live, real relevance of Thanksgiving has been largely lost-the eternal is buried under the pressures of the moment. Society Also Wins

Writing in The Insurance Index, Marion Harper, Jr., propounds two significant questions: ". . . what business is the insurance business in? Does the word 'insurance' really tell the story?"

His point is that insurance does much more than protect us against risk, important and basic as that is. For, he goes on, ". . . it is also in the business of mobilizing capital for corporate and family use; and it's also in the business of building financial stability as a prerequisite to new investment; and it's also in the business of helping people manage their future." Each of these businesses is clearly formidable. Each presents its own particular complexities. And each offers services and protections which are integral parts of the lives of 1- Wast numbers of families. Moreover, Mr. Harper points out, ". . . insurance is one of the few businesses in which, when it wins its part of the bargain, society also wins." The industry maintains broad programs of public information and medical research, by way of example, which help to prolong life and improve health. The result is a combination of economic and social benefits.

Thanksgiving, 1963

At this time of Thanksgiving, 1963, we pause to express our thanks for our many blessings: Ouiet thanks, for America and all she stands for: Humble thanks, for the sacred trust which is faith in God:

Happy thanks, for our business association with you. May your Thanksgiving be abundant, too.

Profits and Growth

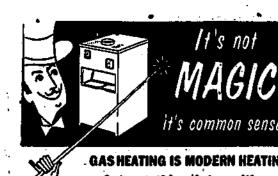

The next annual convention of one of this country's leading retail associations, which will be this organization's 53rd, has been given a significant theme—the "Challenge of Profitable Growth."

To some, this might seem rather like a contradiction in terms, on the grounds that growth and profits go together. But that is not always the case by any means. As an association announcement puts it, "Our theme serves to dramatize the frequently overlooked fact that expansion of volume and facilities alone can't fulfill retailing's desire to share in the fruits of a burgeoning economy."

There is no field of enterprise in which competition is more aggressive than in retailing. Every conceivable kind and size of retail outlet is vying day in and day out for the favor of the demanding and fickle consumer. One result is that, at best, typical retail profits are far lower than is generally realized. In most instances these amount to only about three cents on each dollar of sales. Often they are materially less, as in grocery sales. All the rest of that dollar goes to pay the bills, for labor, supplies, rent and so on.

So profitable growth is definitely a challenge. And that challenge is not limited by those who own, manage and work for retail establishments. In a very real sense it is shared by the consuming public too-for the plain and simple reason that better service, in all its many ramifications, is in large measure dependent on the earning of fair profits.
