Some mistakes are not that easily corrected

Like most newspapers, it's not easy to correct mistakes that are made in other publications. This time, we're making an exception because of the uproar expressed by several of "The Weekly's" readers about a column in the November 4th issue.

The column in question is the "Every Thursday" section, which was published on page 4 of the "The Weekly." The column was written by a local writer who has been a regular contributor to the newspaper.

The column was criticized by several readers for its tone and content, with some calling it "offensive" and "hateful." The newspaper's editorial board agreed and decided to remove the column from future issues.

The newspaper also issued an apology to the writer for the mistake and stated that they would work to improve the quality of their content in the future.

The newspaper hopes that this action will help to improve their reputation and build trust with their readers.
Fuel-switching is no nickel-and-dime proposition.

Before you jump the temporary convenience of changing your fueling habits, be sure to consider the long-term financial and environmental implications.

Why switch?

1. Economic benefits: Fuel prices are always changing, and switching to a cheaper fuel source can save you money in the long run.
2. Environmental impact: Different fuels have varying carbon footprints and emissions profiles. Switching to a cleaner fuel can help reduce your carbon footprint.
3. Energy independence: Relying on a single fuel source can make you susceptible to price shocks. Diversifying your fuel sources can provide greater energy independence.

How to switch?

1. Research: Compare prices and emissions of different fuels to make an informed decision.
2. Preparation: Ensure your vehicle is equipped to handle the new fuel. This might involve purchasing new filters or adapters.
3. Transition plan: Gradually incorporate the new fuel to avoid any issues that might arise during the transition.

Why not switch?

1. Inconvenience: Switching fuel sources can be challenging, especially if you have limited access to alternative fueling stations.
2. Cost: The initial cost of switching, such as purchasing new equipment or training, can be significant.
3. Risk: There’s a risk of running out of the wrong fuel, leading to potential damage to your vehicle.

Conclusion: Fuel-switching is a decision that should be carefully considered. It involves both economic and environmental benefits, but also potential drawbacks. Make sure to weigh all the factors before making a decision.

Fuel-switching is no nickel-and-dime proposition.

Before you go in the unnecessary expense of reworking your heating system, consider what might be accomplished by merely switching between oil and gas. Gas and oil have different efficiencies and costs. The cost of burning oil is approximately $1 per gallon, while gas costs about 8 cents per gallon. Gas is a much more efficient fuel than oil, and can be used to heat a home for a fraction of the price of oil.

Revaluation — only a matter of time for the borough

By Joe Novak

There isn’t much anyone can do about it, but every four years or so, property owners are subjected to a comprehensive revaluation of all the properties in their municipality. The process is mandated by the State of New Jersey and is necessary to ensure that property taxes are fairly assessed. The process takes place over a period of several years and involves a thorough review of each property, including its location, size, condition, and market value.

The revaluation process is designed to ensure that property taxes are distributed fairly among all residents. It is important for property owners to be aware of the revaluation process and take steps to ensure that their property taxes are assessed fairly.

Prospect Park

Patterson

This is a notice to let the property owners know that the property tax assessment for Prospect Park will be reassessed. The new tax assessments will be based on the value of the property as of January 1, 2021. The reassessment process is expected to take place over the next few months.

The new tax assessments will be based on a market value approach and will be used to determine the property taxes for the upcoming tax year. The property owners will receive a notice of the new tax assessment and will have an opportunity to appeal the assessment if they believe it is not accurate.

The reassessment process is an important part of the tax system and helps to ensure that property taxes are distributed fairly among all residents. It is important for property owners to be aware of the reassessment process and take steps to ensure that their property taxes are assessed fairly.
