FIRE PREVENTION MESSAGE

This week being Fire Prevention Week, Fire Chief Fred Hanzkamp has the following message to local housewives and youngsters in regard to the reduction of fire and fire hazards:

"You probably know that President Roosevelt has set aside this week as Fire Prevention Week. I would like to say that plant good housekeeping is one of the best defenses your home can have against fire. You may wonder how that can be, but I would like to enlist housewives who haven't run off to join the W.A.C.'s and youngsters who are too young to shoulder arms in our fight against fire right here in Hawthorne.

"My men in the fire department are always ready to put out a blaze once it starts, but it is up to the home folks to keep the blaze from starting. It's not easy to replace goods that are destroyed by fire these days, even if they are fully insured.

"You should fully consider the danger of a house full of paper, rags, old furniture and the like. You may not have realized it, but a house full of discarded goods is as great a fire menace as an incendiary bomb. Accumulations of old furniture, mattresses, magazines, newspapers and the like not only feed fires that may get started in the home, but may actually ignite spontaneously. This is especially true of old papers and rags in the kitchen or basement can be set afire by exposure to an over-heated stove or furnace.

"Mixing ironing with telephone-ing or answering door bells in another cause of fires in the home. Lives are lost every year because some housewife's fatigues were better than her foresight.

"One of the best ways the average family can observe Fire Prevention Week is to learn the nature of all common home hazards and then set about eliminating them.

"Fire-fighting equipment such as at least one fire extinguisher, should also be kept on hand in every home. We of the fire department will be glad to give the folks in our community any information or help we can.

"It is the duty of every one left at home to take part in the important activities of Fire Prevention Week. It is an important duty for a home burned to rubble or the loss of a child is a great personal tragedy in any family."

Pupil Tells How He Earned Money To Buy Stamps

Thys Palstra, student of the Hawthorne School, in speaking before the student body recently in regard to the means he employed to realize funds for the purchase of War Stamps said:

"I was asked to speak to this assembly about the way I made money to buy War Stamps. This summer I collected old newspapers and sold them. That way I made ten dollars.

"When my birthday came, I asked my mother and father to give me a hundred baby chicks. I sold them when they were about ten weeks old and made twenty-eight dollars."
