EDITORIAL
Don't make this the last weekend
With the long Labor Day weekend about to begin tomorrow, many residents are eager to observe safe driving practices. Be alert before the wheel, buckle up your seat belts, be courteous to other drivers. State police officials have set up full capacity units to deal with holiday traffic. Hitchhiking, illegal stopping and standing will be strictly enforced and indoor units will be in use throughout the Garden State.

Motors are reminded over and over not to mix drinking and driving, yet traffic fatalities occur every year from motorists who are impaired and attempting to operate a motor vehicle.

It's fun to celebrate the last weekend of the season, but that's no reason to make it the last weekend of your life.

A good question
When last week's Supreme Court decision upheld the right of a person to refuse to stand for the salute to the flag, an interesting question was raised by one of the veteran's groups. If a judge can decide that citizens no longer need stand in respect of their country's flag, why must these same citizens do when benched judges enter the courtroom in their flowing robes?

Who has the answer? We won't venture to guess what hope will be used to justify this position. However, it may be wise to ask a question of a deeper shade: This is the time when we want to know that respect is something we demonstrate toward none, but toward others.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Don't forget, traffic rules are as valid in our neighborhood as they were in the heart of the city on the streets.

They do not lack to pick up when we overtake. How many times have we heard the saying, "be safe?" Yet there are people who still refuse to follow them. Why should the garbage in the streets?

Ferraro receives grant

Tom Ferraro, a Junior at Harvest, has received a grant from the National Science Foundation. The grant will enable him to travel to Russia and study the effects of space travel on the human body.

Ferraro plans to use the funds from the grant to cover the costs of his travel, lodging, and other expenses associated with his research.

You can't save the whole world, but maybe a little piece.

Dr. John Smith, a philosophy professor at Harvest, has written a book on the concept of altruism. In the book, he argues that while it is impossible to save the entire world, we can make a difference in the lives of others.

HAWTHORNE ELECTIONS SEPTEMBER 16, 1975

Can a priest be a Mason?

Catholics in a religious dispute that could mean a lost Mass vote at the election of a new bishop in the Archdiocese of Boston have been advised by the Vatican to consider the candidate's involvement in Masonry.

The dispute centers on the question of whether a Catholic priest who is a Mason can serve as a bishop. The Vatican has taken a position against Masons holding religious positions, but the Archdiocese of Boston has expressed support for the priest's candidacy.

The issue has become a central concern for Catholics in the archdiocese, who are divided over the candidate's Masonic affiliation. Some believe that Masonry is incompatible with the Catholic faith, while others argue that it is not a significant issue.

The Archdiocese of Boston is expected to announce the new bishop soon, and the issue of Masonry will likely play a role in the election process.
Ten commandments for stress management

Stress management is among the top popular topics in this summer's reading fare. The number of book, audio and periodical releases relating to the subject is increasing, and the need for stress relief is as pressing as ever.

Here are ten commandments for stress management, according to the American Psychological Association, the American Psychological Society and the National Institute of Mental Health:

1. Find a way to relax...a period of rest and relaxation is essential.
2. A walk in the forest...a period of exercise is essential.
3. A warm bath...a period of rest and relaxation is essential.
4. A quiet place to read...a period of rest and relaxation is essential.
5. A glass of milk...a period of rest and relaxation is essential.
6. A good book...a period of rest and relaxation is essential.
7. A warm blanket...a period of rest and relaxation is essential.
8. A long sleep...a period of rest and relaxation is essential.
9. A good laugh...a period of rest and relaxation is essential.
10. A good cry...a period of rest and relaxation is essential.

To use these commandments, simply find a quiet place to sit down and relax. Close your eyes and take a deep breath. Breathe in slowly, then exhale slowly. Repeat this process several times. This will help you relax and reduce your stress levels.

Paterson's dying

By John J. Greene
City Council President

Some good points of the city that need to be publicized are: the Mayor and his staff, the Police and Fire departments, the School Board, the Board of Health, and the Housing Authority. These are the things that Paterson needs to do to stay alive.

There is a need for more public relations work to be done, especially in the schools. Paterson needs to work harder at getting the message out to the people.

Some things that need to be done are:

1. More public relations work in the schools
2. More public relations work in the community
3. More public relations work in the business community

The Hawthorne Press supports these efforts and hopes that Paterson will continue to improve.

Editorial

NJEA blessing - pro income tax

As for the November election, the New Jersey Education Association (NJEA) has endorsed the Democratic candidates for governor and attorney general. The NJEA is a powerful educational organization with over 100,000 members.

The NJEA has consistently supported policies that benefit public education, such as increased funding for schools and teacher compensation. The endorsement by the NJEA is a significant endorsement for the Democratic candidates.

The NJEA has been a strong advocate for increased funding for public schools, and has worked to ensure that all students have access to quality education.

The endorsement by the NJEA is a strong indication of the importance of public education in New Jersey, and the need for increased funding and support for our schools.

Salary settlement is a shocker!

After hearing hardly any news on the status of teacher negotiations since salary talks began a year ago, the present three-year package is a tremendous blow to us. We produce the harshest taxpayer's gloom and forecast a quick demise of our educational system. This is not to say that the negotiations are not ongoing; they are. The current contract is due to expire at the end of the school year, and negotiations have yet to begin. The teachers' union is asking for an immediate 25% increase in their base salary, which is currently $25,000. The school district has offered a 7% increase over the next three years, which is not sufficient to cover the cost of living. The negotiations are expected to continue for several more months.

The Teachers' Union has threatened to strike if a new contract is not reached by the end of the school year. This would have a significant impact on the education system, causing disruptions to the learning process for students. The teachers are asking for more resources to support their teaching, including smaller class sizes and more support staff.

The school district, on the other hand, is facing a budget shortfall and is eager to keep the costs down. They are also concerned about the impact of a strike on the community and the economy.

The negotiations are complex and contentious, and both sides are holding out for the best possible deal. The outcome of these negotiations will have a significant impact on the future of education in our community.

Brokaw's departure

Last Wednesday, Hawthorne lost one of its commissioners. While the resignation of a borough official not be significant in a municipal that has a council of 20-30 members, it is significant in Hawthorne, one commissioner operates as a third of the borough's governing body. The announcement that Commissioner Arthur Brokaw had decided to step down was accompanied by tear-filled eyes and choked voices on the board as the finance commissioner complained of the last officer resigning at a public meeting.

Although the news came as a surprise to borough residents, there has been hardly any visible reaction from the body. But that, what anyone may say it is too late for to make a decision to give up his seat in the municipality's government, is in order to avoid "any implied conflict of interests," Brokaw has removed himself as the object of criticism for his dual role as borough commissioner and real estate developer in the company that he is on the board of creditors for All of Hawthorne's investors.

In an interview with the board of the finance department, it was apparent that this was not an easy choice for him to make. But because he did not know when he would ever be able to find a replacement, the decision was made to resign his seat immediately. The borough now has the opportunity to fill the vacant position with a new commissioner who can bring fresh ideas and insights to the decision-making process.

Opinion

Curbing a sweet tooth for saccharin

By Simon Alvin A. Williams, Jr.

There are those of us, this writer included, who have a love of the sweet taste that artificial sweeteners are able to provide. However, there is a growing concern regarding the potential health risks associated with the use of such substances.

For many people, these products - which contain aspartame or saccharin - have been a convenient way to enjoy sweet foods and beverages without the added calories. However, recent studies have raised concerns about the long-term effects of consuming high levels of artificial sweeteners.

The United States Food and Drug Administration has not yet identified any single substance that is harmful to human health. However, there is growing evidence to suggest that artificial sweeteners may not be as benign as previously thought.

In conclusion, while artificial sweeteners can be an enjoyable alternative for those trying to reduce their sugar intake, it is important to be aware of the potential health risks associated with their use. Future research will be needed to fully understand the long-term effects of consuming these substances.
